Creative Evolution Revisited: A New Theological Theory of Evolution

The evening of the 10th of September, Howe advanced in two columns, and, by a very fine movement, the left column about men under Lord Cornwallis, with grenadiers and guards directed themselves towards the fords of Birmingham, three miles on our right; the other column continued its road, and at about nine o'clock in the morning it appeared on the other side of the stream. Mead thought the distinction is functional -reflective of the different aspects of the mind's operations within the ever-present social environment in which it lives.
